I'm trying to build a tool that I can use to import mySQL databases (defined in a.sql file) into a phoenix database. I have this working, but I'd like to know if there's a way to validate the schema of the imported file against the database schema before I run it. It's not a big deal if it fails, but I'd like to know how it will fail before I actually run the import. It would be nice to have a file like: file.sql DROP TABLE IF EXISTS `table`; CREATE TABLE `table` ( id VARCHAR(128) NOT NULL, `col1` VARCHAR(128) NOT NULL, PRIMARY KEY (id) ); And I'd like to have a file like: schema.sql DROP TABLE IF EXISTS `table`; CREATE TABLE `table` ( id VARCHAR(128) NOT NULL, `col1` VARCHAR(128) NOT NULL, PRIMARY KEY (id) ); Import file: DROP TABLE IF EXISTS schema.sql; CREATE TABLE schema.sql ( id VARCHAR(128) NOT NULL, `col1` VARCHAR(128) NOT NULL, PRIMARY KEY (id) ); Import: COPY schema.sql INTO TABLE schema.sql; A: You could do this with a SQL script. If you have the.sql file on disk and the database on disk, then you could run a script: -- a script file to run against the DB, a.sql DROP TABLE IF EXISTS schema.sql; CREATE TABLE schema.sql ( id VARCHAR( 4bc0debe42
